California

Bancroft Library

UCB

The Bancroft Library holds many unique collections concerning Native American history. Undoubtedly, most valuable here is the collection of vocabulary lists for 75 Native California languages, compiled by C. Hart Merriam. These have been critically important in language revitalization efforts. To locate the lists, search "C. Hart Merriam" in the Online Archive of California (listed below), and look for the links to "vocabularies" in Volume 1 of the Merriam papers. Other Bancroft collections of special interest to Native American researchers include the Honeyman, R.H. Lowie, A.L. Kroeber, Coronel, Samuel Barrett, J.W. Powell, and Philip Stedman Sparkman collections. Land case maps, dating from the 1500s, are used to determine California land claims. For these, search the OPAC by place name. Oral histories are also a trove of the Bancroft. Search OskiCat for Indians North American oral history as subject keywords and limit to the Bancroft library.

You can search/ browse the "California Cultures" collection through Calisphere (<http://www.calisphere.universityofcalifornia.edu/calcultures>). You can also access the Honeyman collection and others through the Bancroft Library site, <http://bancroft.berkeley.edu/>, but it seems that the online collections are through either calisphere or OAC.

CSUF: KF8203 .I53

An overwhelming but critically important compendium of the laws and treaties through which the U.S. government abused Native Americans from 1778 to 1934. Includes full text of entries, with margin notes and indexes. While this resource does not cover every single law and treaty ever enacted, it is of enduring use to legal scholars. See online resource guide for online availability.
