Abstract: SONA (Save OUR National Archives) is a broad consortium of non-profit organizations and individuals dedicated to the preservation and enhancement of public access and services provided by the REGIONAL offices and collections of the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA). After twelve years, SONA was successful in advocating that the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Service (USCIS) agreed to schedule older Alien Case Files for transfer to NARA's historical collection for public research, June 2009. SONA's core team based in San Francisco consisted of representatives of the Chinese Historical Society of America (CHSA), Angel Island Immigration Station Foundation (AIISF), National Japanese American Historical Society (NJAHS), and the Asian American Studies Department at San Francisco State University.

Languages Represented: Collection materials are in English.

SAVE Our National Archives Organization History

SONA (Save OUR National Archives) was a broad consortium of non-profit organizations and individuals dedicated to the preservation and enhancement of public access and services provided by the REGIONAL offices and collections of the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA). Based in San Francisco with national alliances, SONA formed to protest the closure of the thirteen regional national archives; and that the Alien Case Files (A-Files) were designated as a preserved historical collection at NARA.

The A-Files, the federal government's immigration case files compiled since 1944, contain information for millions of immigrants from over 100 countries. The files include information such as photographs, correspondence, birth certificates, health records, interview transcripts, visas, application material and other information on all non-naturalized residents, both legal and illegal. They are of particular interest to the Chinese American community as a large number of A-Files supplement information collected during earlier Chinese Exclusion Act-era files (1882-1943).

After initially joining the national protest, SONA and others were able to pressure NARA to cancel its plans to close the regional archives. However it took twelve years before SONA was successful in advocating that the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Service (USCIS) agree to schedule older Alien Case Files for transfer to NARA's historical collection for public research. The agreement to permanently preserve the files was signed in June 2009. In addition to securing preservation and public access, SONA advocated to name the Research Room at the National Archives in San Francisco be named in honor of Congressman Tom Lantos, a longtime supporter of SONA's efforts. SONA's core team based in San Francisco consisted of representatives of the Chinese Historical Society of America (CHSA), Angel Island Immigration Station Foundation (AIISF), National Japanese American Historical Society (NJAHS), and the Asian American Studies Department at San Francisco State University .

SCOPE AND CONTENT OF COLLECTION

SONA (Save OUR National Archives) was a broad consortium of non-profit organizations and individuals dedicated to the preservation and enhancement of public access and services provided by the REGIONAL offices and collections of the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA). Based in San Francisco with national alliances, SONA formed to protest the closure of the thirteen regional national archives; and that the Alien Case Files (A-Files) were designated as a preserved historical collection at NARA.

This collection contains comprehensive newspaper coverage of the twelve year campaign to preserve the Alien Case Files and make them accessible to the public. It also contains detailed email correspondence, petitions and letters to NARA, USCIS, various legislators and others regarding preservation and public access to the A-Files, resources and advocacy materials and VHS/DVD media items, as well as materials related to the naming of the Research Room at the National Archives in San Francisco.
