ORGANIZATION HISTORY

Established in 1969 in the midst of national and global decolonial uprisings, the Department of Ethnic Studies emerged from student and community members' demands for scholarly programs that would provide relevant and liberatory education for Third World communities including African Americans, Asian Americans, Chicanos, and Native Americans. Following a year-long struggle for a Black Studies program and inspired by the organizing at San Francisco State College, the Afro-American Student Union convened a meeting of Third World students which resulted in the creation of the Third World Liberation Front (TWLF), a coalition of students and student organizations including the Asian American Political Alliance, Mexican American Student Confederation, Native Student Union, and more. Under the banner of the TWLF, these activists at UC Berkeley initially proposed the creation of a Third World College similar to the one established a year before at San Francisco State University. After one of the longest and most violent student strikes in U.S. history, a compromise was reached that resulted in the creation of a Department of Ethnic Studies that housed four undergraduate programs: African American Studies, Asian American Studies, Chicano Studies, and Native American Studies. The initial compromise included a plan for the Department of Ethnic Studies to eventually become a Third World College.

Since the Department was founded, Ethnic Studies at UC Berkeley has consistently transformed with the African American Studies program becoming the Department of African American and African Diaspora Studies, the Asian American Studies program becoming the Asian American and Asian Diaspora Studies program, the Chicano Studies program becoming the Chicana/o and Latina/o Studies program, the formation of a Comparative Ethnic Studies area of focus, and the creation of a doctoral program (PhD). In 1997, the Ethnic Studies Library was established by consolidating the individual program reading rooms. In 1999, in response to drastic budget cuts and the loss of faculty members which resulted in many courses being cut, students organized another series of rallies, sit-ins, and hunger strikes, again under the banner of the third world Liberation Front (twLF). This activism resulted in additional faculty positions, the creation of the Multicultural Community Center, and the establishment of the Center for Race and Gender.

SCOPE AND CONTENT OF COLLECTION

This collection contains materials documenting the UC Berkeley Ethnic Studies Department from its founding in 1969 to the 2010s. Originally composed of four academic disciplines: Afro-American Studies, Chicano Studies, Asian American Studies and Native American Studies, the department of Ethnic Studies grew out of a student-led strike to a nationally-recognized academic unit, producing some of the most dynamic and influential scholarship in the field. The origins of the department are rooted in struggles for self-determination and civil rights as in 1969, students united to demand systemic change and the creation of Ethnic Studies, a new discipline meant to challenge Eurocentric epistemologies and support scholarship that would empower and bring justice and material change for communities of color on and off campus.

This collection documents the history of the newly formed discipline – the newly conceived array of courses; the proposals that shifted the structure, culture and dynamics of the discipline; the focus on student engagement with the community, the struggles between Ethnic Studies and UC Berkeley and UC administration, and the continued protests and strikes to guarantee the hard-earned victories of the students in the 1969 Third World Liberation Front. Contained within are extensive documentation of the departments as they evolved from a set of demands into a robust academic unit and the tensions within and outside the department related to institutionalization and changing global, national and local politics.

Materials in this collection include administrative memorandum and correspondence, course catalogs, meeting minutes, curricula, news clippings, proposals, committee notes, and departmental reviews. These cover a span of over fifty years and include some of the formative moments in the history of the department including the separation of Afro-American studies from Ethnic Studies in 1974, strikes and protests, debates about departmental reorganization, external reviews, budget cuts and more.

SERIES DESCRIPTIONS

SERIES 1: Afro-American Studies / African-American Studies, 1968 – 2004

Carton 1 Folders 1 – 18 Arranged Chronologically

Contains proposals, correspondence, statements, reports, news articles and other materials related primarily to the first seven years of what is now the Department African-American Studies. Materials of note include the proposals to create a Black Studies Program and Department for Afro-American Studies; correspondence about the deteriorating relationship between the administration and the Black Studies coordinator Ron Lewis and his subsequent firing; information about the split of Black studies from Ethnic Studies; correspondence, news articles and other materials about the protests undertaken by faculty and students regarding the hiring of William Banks; information about the founding of Black Studies at other colleges and universities and assorted ephemera, reports and articles from the early years of the department.

SERIES 2: Native American Studies, 1970 – 2011

Carton 1 Folders 19 – 36 Arranged Chronologically

Contains materials surrounding the creation of the Native American Studies program. Includes pamphlets and reports about the conditions and presence of Native students on UC Berkeley's campus and the importance of offering Native American Studies in higher education; initial summary of the program; resources from the Native occupation of Alcatraz Island (1970); course announcements, proposals, catalogs, and syllabi; materials from the American Indian Graduate Program; and other materials related to the program.

SERIES 3: Chicano Studies, 1971 – 1996

Carton 2 Folders 1 – 42 Arranged Chronologically

Contains materials related to the Chicano Studies program, established in 1969 as a direct consequence of Third World Strike demands by students of Mexican descent for the University to research and teach a curriculum based on the Chicano experience in the United States. Includes proposals, meeting minutes, course information, administrative information, and other departmental materials.

SERIES 4: Asian American Studies, 1968 – 2014

Carton 3 – Carton 6 Arranged Chronologically

Contains materials related to the founding of the Asian Studies Department. Includes extensive committee materials from the first decade of the department as well as curriculum, correspondence, program and course proposals, meeting minutes, debates within the program, student connection and involvement in the International Hotel and the Asian Community Center in San Francisco, and information on workshops, conferences and student initiatives.

SERIES 5: Ethnic Studies Departmental Records, 1963 – 2012

SUBSERIES 5.1: News clippings, 1969 – 2012

Carton 7 Folders 1 – 2 Arranged Chronologically

Contains news-clippings from assorted sources related news about the Department of Ethnic Studies.

SUBSERIES 5.2: Proposals, 1969 – 1981

Carton 7 Folders 3 – 16 Arranged Chronologically

Contains original proposals for the Third World College (Black Studies, Native American Studies, Chicano Studies, and Asian Studies) and modified plans for a different iteration of the Third World College in 1974 (after the separate formation of a Department of Afro-American Studies).

SUBSERIES 5.3: Correspondence, 1969 – 1993

Carton 7 Folders 17 – 27 Arranged Chronologically

Contains official university correspondence related to and produced by the Department of Ethnic Studies. Items range from statements from the Office of the Chancellor and Chancellor Heyns about the Third World Liberation Front strike and the initial establishment of Ethnic Studies; correspondence to faculty and staff and letters from politicians and legislators related to the initial years of Ethnic Studies; and correspondence between university departments and official correspondence from the Department of Ethnic Studies.

SUBSERIES 5.4: Department Reorganization Proposals, 1994 – 1998

Carton 7 Folders 28– 33 Arranged Chronologically

Contains proposals from 1994 to reorganize the Department of Ethnic Studies and introduce a cluster plan. The proposal would have changed the Department of Ethnic Studies (with programs in Chicano Studies, Asian American Studies, and Native American Studies) to a Department of Comparative Ethnic Studies and then grant departmental status to Chicano Studies, Asian-American Studies and Native American Studies. This series also contains a letter from L. Ling-chi Wang (chair of Ethnic Studies) to faculty, staff and students about a proposal to transform Ethnic Studies into American Studies.

SUBSERIES 5.5: Department Reviews, 1972 – 1993

Carton 7 Folders 34 – 40 Arranged Chronologically

Contains notable reports and related materials evaluating the Ethnic Studies Department. Also contains student and faculty responses from the 1992 report.

SUBSERIES 5.6: Meeting Minutes, 1970 – 1978

Carton 8 Folders 1 – 4 Arranged Chronologically

Contains meeting minutes – divided by convening body – Ethnic Studies Coordinators, Executive Council, Faculty and ASUC Senate.

SUBSERIES 5.7: Committees, 1968 – 1992

Carton 8 Folders 5 – 20 Arranged Chronologically

Contains materials related to assorted committees intersecting with the Department of Ethnic Studies in its first two years on campus. In addition to administrative committees, this series includes committees focused on university-community engagement and the Third World Board which contained representatives from all four ethnic groups and was responsible for coordinating community projects through the 1970s. Contains meeting notes, agendas, draft proposals and reports and correspondence from various committees related to or created by the Ethnic Studies Department.

SUBSERIES 5.8: Surveys, 1968 – 1979

Carton 8 Folders 21 – 28 Arranged Chronologically

Contains reports, statistics, election results, surveys related to various studies conducted by the Ethnic Studies Department. Survey topics range from minority student experiences on campus, racial demographics of UC Berkeley students and staff/employees and number of minority candidates standing for election by county in California.

SUBSERIES 5.9: General History, 1969 – 1997

Carton 9 Folder 1 – 2 Arranged Chronologically

Contains materials pertaining to the original goals, needs, organization and historical background re: the struggle for a Third World College and a chronology of important events related to Ethnic Studies on the UC Berkeley campus.

SUBSERIES 5.10: Strikes and Protests, 1963 – 2011

Carton 9 Folders 2 – 18 Arranged Chronologically

Contains flyers, ephemera, news coverage, fact sheets and pamphlets, correspondence and photographs about student protests, mobilizations, and strikes related to the Ethnic Studies Department. There is not only comprehensive coverage of the 1999 twLF strike, including extensive newspaper articles covering the strike, but also materials focusing on student mobilizations before and after 1999 such as the protests against Chancellor Berdahl's inauguration in 1997, the Walkout in Defense of Affirmative Action in 1998 and the Hunger Strike of 2011. There are also miscellaneous materials about rallies and protests on campus and throughout the third world.
